The total number of farms in the United States is about 5,000,000; 1,280,000 are rented. Since 1880 there has been an increase in farm renting to the extent of twenty-five per cent. It is evident to the most ordinary observer that the farms are passing out of the hands of those who cultivate them. It cannot be urged that this is the result of incompetency or idleness on the part of the tillers of the soil, for statistics show that the wealth of the country has, during the past twenty-five years, increased more than one hundred per cent. No other nation has ever shown such an enormous increase of wealth in the same length of time. All this increase of wealth is the result of the active energies of the producers. It is a peculiar condition, that the producers of all this wealth have gradually grown poorer, but still the cold, hard fact stares them in the face that they are not only not living as slipping from their grasp.

THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

No organization spontaneously organized to protest against dominent evils or wrongs since the opening of the century has had before it a field so teeming with to this the comparative statistics show possibilities as the Alliance has. This organization sprung into existence at a time not alone critical but transitional in States, and that the number of small the history of the South. So far it has continued to fulfil its mission. It has brought about radical changes in action, methods and ideas. Will it continue to increase in usefulness and good works?

The last straw broke the camel's back yet this straw was only one of a multitude of straws. The bagging question brought the Alliance into great promiterests and give to them the fruits of their nence, yet this question was only one of a host of other vital questions that were before the Southern people.

As we understand i, the Alliance of to-day has something more in view than the mere settling of whether or not the farm. is of the South shall pay whatever price is asked for jute bagging and ask no question. This question is not lost sight of, but others equally important are put on a par with it. When the writer was in Alabama recently he fell in conversation with a farmer who was on his way to Anniston. In telling of his experience in farming, this farmer well illustrated what the Alliance has done and can still continue to do for the South. In former years he had often raised ten or twelve bales of cotton to the mule on his land. This year he only raised seven. But he makes more money now than he did then, for then cotton was his sole crop. This year he raised corn enough for his family and help, and has some to sell. He also raises nearly all his pork. His cotton, therefore, represents a large increment of profit, and he will lay by some money. The one great purpose of an organization like the Alliance is to teach its members to think. This thinking makes them have more regard for their own welfare and interests. The Alabama farmer had thought out the economy of raising his own corn and pork. And the Alliance, we believe, will lead others of its members, as it has led this one, to independence of thought and action. In so doing it will settle the bagging question; it will kill the one-crop method; it will bring better, happier and more contented homes to its members; it will drive out the wolf-like money changers, and in short, will clear the highway to prosperity of obstacles which have been holding the Southern farmer in debt to the West, the North and to the outside world.

One stumbling block threatens the Alliance—that of dabbling in politics; but with its clean record up to date, the earnestness and sound common sense of its members, and the great amount of good work yet to be done for the upbuilding and uplifting of the South, the Manufacturers' Record believe that this will be avoided, and that the Alliance will go on increasing in strength, earnestness and good works .- Manufacturers'

MANNERS OF CHILDREN.

Little civilities are so easily taught a child; they so inevitably cling to them hereafter, it is a burning shame that parents of sense and taste allow the simplest in the different sections of the country, so rules of politeness to be gathered from a later social intercourse, or to be donned and doffed like the Sunday dress. To the first lesson, not to put his knife to his mouth, can be added further injunctions just as important, which must be taught now. The only objection can be that too many rules bewilder and perplex, and that the most important are as to the condition of the various crops those of principle, not behavior. But principle should guide their behavior. And object teaching is said to be wearisome. If one sees and knows only the right way, how will he learn the wrong?-Good Housekeeper.

A SENSATION

That Discounted the Famous One Caused by a Bull in a China Shop.

Something of a sensation seems to have been caused by the use of the snow plow during the recent snow blockade on the Denver road. The plow was put to work in a big cut where the snow was about twenty feet deep and made excellent headway, throwing an avalanche of snow fifty feet into the air at every revolution of the great plow which literally bored itself through a mass as compact as sand. When about the center of the cut a strange sight was witnessed. Those who were standing on either side of the plow were saddenly deluged with a shower of beefsteaks. On all sides feli porterhouse, sirloin, round steaks, shoulder steaks, with occasionally a slice of liver or a nicely cut rib roast. It was thought at first that the engine had left the track and was boring its way through a butcher shop. Investigation, however, disclosed the fact that a herd of Texas cattle had crowded into the cut and had frozen and been buried in the drift. The manager immediately declared that no well regulated road should be without a rotary snow

THE SMALLPOX MICROBE.

Dr. Sicard, of Beziers, in a memoir handed in to the French Academie de Medecin for competition for the Alvarenga prize, announces that he has at last discovered the long sought for microbe of smallpox. He reports it to be a bacterion belonging to the class of cocci; round, with a transparent center, umbilicated in the middle, while its edges are raised.

"This ba terion can be readily cultivated on gelatine that has been sterilized by and all good Alliance men when trading bichtoride of mercury. It can be found at all stages of smallpox, not only in the pustules of the skin, but in the mucus of the bronchial tubes and in the blood as well. It is likewise found suspended in the air of rooms containing smallpox patients, and if water be allowed to stand in such rooms in open vessels, it soon contains the smallpox bacterion. However, when animals are inoculated with cultures of this bacterion, although they manifest uneasiness, the symptoms are entirely transitory, not at all serious, and,

VICTORIA'S THRONE.

The English throne, used in the coronation ceremonies of the Kings and Queens of Great Britain, and which is so splendid in its covering of rich silks, velvets and gold, is, in fact, simply an old oak chair of antique pattern. It has been used in all state occasions for the last 900 years, and perhaps even longer, many reputable writers claiming that they have discovered traces of its existence prior to the eleventh century. Ages of use have made the old oak ramework as hard and as tough as iron. The back and sides of this chair throne were formerly painted in various colors, all of which are now hidden by heavy hangings of satin, silk and velvet.

The magic power attributed to the old relic lies in the seat, which is made of a heavy rough looking sandstone, 26 inches in length, 17 1-2 inches in width and 19 1-2 inches in thickness. Long before it was wrapped in velvet and trimmed in gold, to be used by the Tudors and the Stuarts, this old stone of stones served as a seat during the coronations of the early Scottish Kings.

LAW'S ABSURDITIES.

The ordinary individual knows little of egal forms and documents. If the operation of the laws in any way directly becomes of interest to him he puts the entire matter into the hands of a awyer and makes no attempt to inform himself closely concerning later proceedings. When it happens that the ordinary man does have his attention drawn to these things he is apt to be surprised and half disgusted at the red tape and verbosity which is necessary in order to carry on legal processes. Here, for example, is a copy of an indictment recently filed in the State Secretary's office for the purpose of securing a requisition for the man indicted, who had fled to another State.

"The Grand Jurors in and for the County of Perry and State of Indiana on their oath present and charge that Charles Smith, on the 7th day of January, in the year A.
